

Jeff Nally, PCC, RPCC, SHRM-SCP, SPHR

Jeff Nally is the president of Nally Group, Inc. where he is an executive coach, speaker, and author with over 23 years of experience improving leaders, teams and organizations. Jeff synthesizes neuroscience research, cognitive psychology, and coaching methodologies so leaders get results with the brain in mind. Jeff created and led the executive coaching practice at Humana for nine years. He was an internal executive coach at Humana where he led over 550 engagements including one-on-one and group coaching. He created and led Humana's Women in Leadership coaching experience for the top 130 women in the company, and he coached new leaders transitioning into the company and into new leadership roles.

Jeff holds an MBA with a concentration in marketing from Georgia State University, and a BA in Psychology from Georgetown College. He has been a Professional Certified Coach (PCC) through the International Coach Federation since 2014, a Results Professional Certified Coach (RPCC) through The NeuroLeadership Group since 2011, and a certified StrengthsFinder Performance Coach through The Gallup Organization since 2006. Jeff has been a certified Senior Professional in Human Resources (SPHR) from the Human Resources Certification Institute since 1999 and a Senior Certified Professional from the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM-SCP) since its inception in 2015. He achieved the Certificate in the Foundations of NeuroLeadership and graduated "with distinction" from The NeuroLeadership Institute in 2015. Jeff is the chair of the HR Advisory Committee at Metro United Way, and is chair-elect of Advisory Board of the School of Business at Spalding University. Jeff and his husband, Robert Johnson celebrated their 23rd anniversary and are parents to their fifteen-year-old son, Adam.
