

Michelle Naiser

Michele Naiser is a leadership coach and organization development consultant. Michelle's uniquely varied background makes her a sought after thought partner and coach to teams and leaders in large organizations. She has been an member of ICF since 2010.

Michelle has coached leaders in industries including non-profit, health care, logistics, airlines and beverage alcohol. She draws on her considerable experience and training to facilitate coaching engagements where clients craft sustainable change aligned with their values and unique leadership style.

Prior to launching her coaching practice, Michelle was Director of Organizational Development for Brown-Forman Corporation. In that enterprise wide role she was responsible for strategic oversight of performance management, coaching, mentoring, career management training and a wide array of interventions including facilitation, training, teambuilding and behavioral assessments.

Michelle received an MBA and an MS in Leadership and Organizational Development from the University of Louisville. And she is an alumna of the Darden Executive Partnership Program and Center for Creative Leadership's Strategic Leadership Program. She attended coach training at New Ventures West and completed the Leadership Coaching Program at Georgetown University's Center for Transformational Leadership. Michelle has obtained the Associate Coach Certification from the International Coach Federation.